Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an image processing apparatus and an image processing method, and more particularly, to an image processing apparatus and an image processing method which can change an interpolation method applied to an image to be processed in accordance with a change in resolution, such as that obtained when an image is recorded by a digital camera, or during playback. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, images recorded by digital cameras and the like have been digitized and have been stored in the form of digital files. Accordingly, it has become possible to perform digital image processing on the basis of the digital files. To digitize an image and record it, it is necessary to compress an image into a digital file. As such compression methods, for example, JPEG (Joint Photographic Experts Group) is known. For example, if JPEG-compressed image data is to be printed out, image data of an original image is first expanded to a full page width (a full image width) and then decoded. The image is printed out on the basis of the decoded image data. If the decoded image data is to be recorded, the image is recorded. In the case of the compression method, such as JPEG, the compression ratio is increased as the image resolution becomes higher, and therefore if the image resolution is low, image data can be compressed with ease. If the image resolution is high, however, the compression ratio is small and the image data becomes large in size. If the compression ratio is large, therefore, if an
